'Get Cracking'

ment plans an early election, assiduously spread by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and a few other politicians, have been effectively spiked by Prime Minister Pearson.

Mr. Pearson took the unusual step of reiterating in the Commons week what he said on being elected as head of a minority government: that he intended to proceed with his program as though there was no threat of a united opposition cutting short his normal four-year term.

"If there is an election before that time it will be the responsibility of other parties in this House," said the Prime Minister with the full knowledge that the majority of Canadians, and for that matter most of the members in opposition, are not at all anxious to go through the turmoil and expense of another general election for some time at

RUMORS THAT THE GOVERN- spreading the gossip about an early election is quite obvious. If enough people can be convinced that another vote is in the offing, the program of legislative obstruction which has been initiated by the leader of the opposition will seem in some respects more easy to justify,

> Meanwhile, the conduct of the people's business in Parliament continues at a laggard pace. More than 460 estimates and important legislative measures, which the government needs passed before year-end, are still to be dealt with.

The suggestion has been made, FROM OTTAWA and unhappily received by members, that unless they act quickly they will be faced with the prospect of recessing for only six days at Christmas.

However, it is doubtful that the members' dismay at this prospect. Hagainst his leadership—but loaing will be fully shared by those who an election in the process Conservative sent them to Ottawa. Long Way from Trouble Spots

THE DECISION TO MOVE THE Royal Canadian Air Force search and rescue operations from the Sea Island base at Vancouver to the Comox air station urgently needs to be reviewed by Defence Minister Hellyer.

The shift, part of the defence economy program announced by the minister last week, is a serious threat to the safety of thousands of small-craft operators—both plea-sure and commercial—in the Strait of Georgia, Haro Strait and Juan de Fuca areas. To relocate air search and rescue operations 150 miles or more from the region where they are primarily needed cannot be considered a reasonable step even if it does effect certain economies in the defence budget.

Relocation of the air force search craft at Comox is seen as an even more retrograde step in view of the fact that the Navy's helicopter operation at Patricia Bay, which car be called on for duty in air search and rescue emergencies, is being curtailed. Instead of three helicopters, two of which are always operational, the Navy station being cut to one machine, which obviously cannot be operational at all times or which might be on other duties when required.

The air force helicopters will be of very limited use for search and rescue in the area most heavily from one-and-a-half to two hours tragic loss of life.

flying time and cut operational time almost nothing.

Even for the Albatross amphibian aircraft which are used by the air force for search and rescue, the extra distance could mean loss of an hour or more getting to the scene of operations in southern Gulf of Georgia waters, and time aloft for these aircraft would be cut by the need to refuel that much sooner.

When it is considered that time of the essence in small craft emergencies, it just does not make sense to move the search and rescue base farther from the main scene of activity. About the only large areas which would receive reasonable protection from this move are the relatively sheltered waters from Texada Island to the Queen Char-lotte Strait—which have the least need of the service

It is true that in formulating a new organization for Canadian defence forces, certain calculated risks must be taken in manpower and equipment after due consideration of the kind of military threats with which this country may become Calculated risk, however, plays no part in search and rescue operations. It can be demonstrated with a chart and dividers, plus the past record of small craft emergencies in British Columbia coastal waters, that moving search and rescue operpopulated by small craft due to the distance from Comox which will add to Comox is a certain invitation to promoted to more important departissue as Free Trade versus

'Fresh Wind' for Indians

TT IS NOT SURPRISING THAT Mr. Tom Barnett's private members' bill to give normal liquor rights to all Indians was talked out when it was presented to the House of Commons the other day.

Despite changes which some provinces have made to remove this point of discrimination against the native, there is widespead doubt in some areas over the desirability of lifting restrictions.

But if the bill slipped into limbo, the opportunity it afforded to debate the Indian's position was valuable. A Liberal back-bencher, Mr. Ian Watson, took the occasion to advocate a complete overhaul of the Indian affair branch and to recommend that existing paternalism toward Indians be eliminated.

This makes sense if Canadians ever hope to encourage the native greater impediment than an aid to to assume his rightful place in our progress.

society. For too long the authorities have given him small concessions which tend to discourage his development of independence. It is too easy for him to fear that abandonment of special privileges — which must be relinquished if he is to become enfranchised-would be too high a price to pay for the doubtful blessings of full citizenship.

It is heartening to hear Mr. Wat-son's belief that a "fresh wind" is blowing through the Indian affairs branch. Under no circumstances should the government's treatment of the native be less than generous. But, as some provincial legislators have pointed out in British Columbia, it is difficult for a person to learn to walk properly if he is kept dependent on a crutch. The crutch could be the present law as it concerns Indians-seen by many as a Strictly speaking, this will not be a leadership convention. As Mr. Diefenbaker himself has pointed out, no one is running against him. There is no contest,

But unofficially there is known to be growing feeling among influential Tories that, for the good of the party and of the nation, "Dief" must go.

Among this expanding group are a umber of Conservatives who want to set the stage at the annual meeting for a definite leadership convention, perhaps in late spring or early summer

Secret Leadership Ballot

The way in which they hope to do this is to establish, at the opening of the annual meeting, a rule under which resolutions-particularly the normally routine olutions confirming the party leader will be voted on by secret ballot. The usual procedure at annual meetings is to deal with resolutions by voice vote or mass emotion which Mr. Diefenbaker has been so successful in stimulating.

There is no indication that the nebels are by any means in the majority. Through the secret ballot, however, th hope to demonstrate that a substantial group is opposed to the present leader.

To Secure Convention

Unless "Dief the Chief" gets at least 75 per cent of the vote, they argue in the conviction that he won't, a leadership convention will be a must.

The reasons behind this move are illuminating, if sad. Hatred or bitterness appear to play little part in the motivations of those who would remove Mr.

Disappointment and disillusion would be more accurate definitions. Tories I have talked to say they regret Mr. Diefenbaker's apparent inability to make much of a recovery since his election defeat. even though the Liberal administration has handed him a good deal of ammu-

There is alarm, tinged with the same regret, that Mr. Diefenbaker appears ready to split the nation in an attempt to regain office. Quebec Conservatives grieve that their chief harps on Liberal concessions to Quebec; they do realize that a definite reaction against Quebec is taking place in Western Canada, but they feel Mr. Diefenbaker is badly mistaken in attempting to exploit it politically.

"He thinks he can win the next election without Quebec, as he did in 1957," one Tory told me, "It just can't be done. Conditions today are different, but he doesn't realize it. This is the unhappy part of it all. "We respect the man for what he has done in the past. But he doesn't seem to realize that things change — so many things have changed."

And as Quebec Tories turn against Mr. Diefenbaker, many Ontario Conservatives continue to hope and work for a new leader, including some who were involved in last February's "palace revolt" within the cabinet but who backed down at the last minute.

An example of the feeling that Mr. Diefenbaker's going is sought more in sorrow than in anger is one report that group of wealthy Conservatives are prepared to put up a large retirement fund for the Diefenbakers if the ex-prime minister will just leave gracefully.

The question of who would replace Mr. Diefenbaker appears to worry few of the rebels. They remember his statement that there was no shortage of material and they believe the right man could be found.

Balcer for Leader?

Leon Balcer, the ex-transport minister, could be one candidate. He is viewed as a sound, solid and hardworking politician who, on occasion, is able to reach oratorical heights if he has to.

Another possibility would be Manitoba Premier Duff Roblin. While he has expressed little interest in the job, his backers feel he would be widely acceptable across the country and, with a little persuasion, might budge.

The main preoccupation of the new leader promoters, however, is not in selecting a successor, but in opening up have read many pros and cons about this, and about the only advantage I can see in bottle feeding is that there are some cases in which the mother does not give her baby enough milk. In such cases, of bottle feeding is What has always impressed me is that nother's milk was made Alvarez for a hungry infant and cow's milk wasn't. Cow's milk can produce in an infant severe forms of allergy which can be a nuisance for the rest of the child's life. Many a bottle infant's skin gets covered with eczema, or he gets severe stomach aches, or diarrhea, or asthma. That his troubles are allergic in nature is shown by the fact that he quickly gets well when given goat's milk or a milk like material made from soy beans.

Years ago, my friend Dr. Corwin Hin shaw and I questioned with care 500 patients seen consecutively in our offices, and found that a fourth of them had trouble with milk. Some just could not touch it. Some said they had always been allergic to it.

Sixty-five years ago, when I was in high school, none of my classmates, so far as I can remember, had any allergic trouble, such as asthma or eczema, and I often wonder if the absence of allergy in those days was due to the fact that few infants were brought up on a bottle.

I have just been reading a fine book called "The Womanly Art of Breast Feed-ing." The authors of this book feel strongly that a mother ought to nurse her baby. As the famous Dr. Grantly Dick Read wrote a while ago, "The newborn baby makes only three demands: warmth in the arms of its mother, food from her breast, and security in the knowledge of her presence."

On page 13 of the book one finds some very impressive letters from mothers who say that after they had had several bottle-fed bables, they tried breast feeding, and are now very glad that they did. One rejoices over the "wonderful feeling of being needed." She wrote, "The baby needs me as no other person in the whole world ever has; and no one else can take my place with her." "When I finally put her down I find that I am calm again, and kinder to the rest of the family."

Another woman says, "Patti is our fifth child, the first to be breast-fed. I am amazed at the difference in me. I had no idea what I was missing. It is a feeling of growth and development — I feel as if I have finally arrived; I have a sense of completeness, of Another woman, after having had three Another woman, after having had three bottle-fed babies, decided to nurse the next-one. She speaks of the "lovely warm glow that nursing imparts." Khrushchev told a full dress WARNS OFFENDERS

He warned Western countries against trying to force Soviet political concessions in return for aid at a time when the Russians admit they are deep in difficulties because of farm production failures. He told the West the Soviet Union would tri-umph, if necessary, "without umph, if necessary, our support."

The premier announced that between 1964 and 1970 the gov-ernment will invest more than 42,000,000,000 rubles ($46,620,-000,000 at the official exchange rate) in developing the chemical industry and getting fertilizer to the farm where it is needed.

During the seven-year period, he said, approximately 200 new chemical plants will be built and more than 500 existing plants will be reconstructed. Khrushchev said the program would increase the output of chemical products 3 to 3½

Khrushchev told a full dress meeting of the Communist party central committee that never again will the Soviet Union export grain and let its people starve—as he said was done in the days of Stalin.

He warned Western countries warned western countries size recent grain nurshases. Come distended with hunger come distended with hunger from lack of bread, and even dome to nothing. Do not try to dictate political terms to the Soviet Union. As the saying goes, harvest was smaller than 1962 was a shortage of grain, particularly wheat.

C. J. Loewen, Stock Market Founder, Dies

VANCOUVER (CP)—Charles Joseph Loewen, 96, one of the original 10 founders of the Van-couver Stock Exchange, died in hospital during the weekend af-ter an illness of a year.

A native of Victoria when B.C. was still a colony, he was in real estate there before coming to Vancouver to found a firm here. He later helped to form the Vancouver Club and still later the Stock Exchange and was the last surviving founder of both.

He and his wife, the former Edith Warren, an accomplished horsewoman, owned the Lazy L Ranch near the present Craigmont mine in the interior and bred thoroughbred and Clydes-dale horses there. Survivors include a son, Gen.

Hellyer also has direct lines NORAD in Colorado Springs, Colo., and Washington, at his office and home. Under the system of joint control, the Bomarcs are useless without the authorization of both the U.S. president and Canadian prime minister or their designated substitutes. The basic principle lies in wo keys to two locked switches at North Bay which both must be turned on before a Bomarc can be launched. The keys are held constantly by a designated Canadian and Uni-ted States officer respectively.

Five Steps

Five steps must be taken before a Bomarc can be fired: —The commander-in-chief of NORAD (U.S. Gen. John Gerhart or his deputy, Canadian air marshall Roy Slemon) in Colorado Springs must be noti-fied that the U.S. president has authorized the release of the warheads from U.S. custody for use by Canadian for ces in NORAD.

The commander in chief must also have authorization from the prime minister of Canada to release the actual equipment — the Bomarc — for use by his forces. —The U.S. officer with custody of his key at North Bay, having proper and authentic evidence of his president's directions, then would unlock the U.S. switch

—The Canadian officer at North Bay, with the same evidence of the prime minister's authorization, would unlock the second and final switch.

—At this point the weapon would be available for firing, but still could not be fired until the SAGE commander at North Bay had directed his senior weapons officer to the le Canadian officer at senior weapons officer to use e Bomarcs against attacking

NEW YORK (AP)—Pittsburgh Steelers, stopped on fourth down every time they've been close to the National Football League throne, have faked their way into a winner-take-all battle at New York and a shot at grabbing their first eastern conference title.

Way into a winner-take-all battle at New York and a shot at grabbing their first stelers had the clock and the scoreboard s t a c k e d against them at Dallas Sunday, trailing 19-17 with only 3½ minutes to go while Giants' 44-14 victory over Washington Redskins already had been posted. And they were on their own 16, fourth down and 14 to go.

Pittsburgh quarterback Ed Brown went back into punts formation, faked a kick, then whipped a 42-yard pass to Red Mack. Steelers kept the drive going until Theron Sapp bolted 24 yards off right guard for the deciding touchdown with 1:53 left.

The board argues that if teachers don't get a raise this year the district's salary scale politicians, provincial and civic will fall behind other parts of officials. will fall behind other parts of officials, professional men and the province and the board women, tradesmen, writers, will have trouble attracting teachers.

But the real bone of contention isn't money.

It is the salary increment pattern by which at present teachers take 11 years to climb from bottom of the salary scale to the top. The board wants to make this 12 years with salary increases at all levels, but the teachers say they would rather stick with the present agreement.

The feast of frindship was originated four years ago by Mr. and Mrs. David McMillan, Holland Road, who take an active interest in the problems of B.C.'s native people.

Make Birks Your Christmas Shopping

For the Convenience of Your Christmas Shopping You May Shop Four Ways at Birks

Headquarters

- YOU MAY PAY CASH

Many of our customers prefer to pay cash at the time they make their purchase. This is, however, only one of the several ways in which to shop at Birks.

- MONTHLY CHARGE ACCOUNTS

Many other Birks customers find it convenient to use their monthly Charge Account. Those who prefer this method of payment-and have, not already opened a Charge Account-are invited to do so in time for Christmas Shopping. The few formalities required can be concluded at counter with a minimum of delay.

9 - BIRKS BUDGET ACCOUNTS

Our Budget Account Plan is becoming increasingly popular. On any purchase of $15.00 or over, a Budget Account may be opened, with Budget Terms as low as 10% down (minimum down payment $5.00) and the balance may be extended over a period as long as 12 months.

- BIRKS LAY-AWAY PLAN

Under this convenient plan-much favoured by early Christmas Shoppers -you may pay a small deposit and the article is held for future delivery. The balance is payable either by further deposits or in one final amount, as you prefer.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

How different would the course of the world been had Adolf Hitler not burned the books in the early '30s and begun his infamous purge of the

This thought continually crossed Ten Seconds That Shook the World on Channels 2 and 6.

It was Hitler who drove scientists Albert Einstein, Edward Teller and Enrico Fermi from the fascist countries to the United States. These three men, and particularly the latter pair, were responsible for the scientific work which resulted in

The David L. Wolper - produced documentary gathered film from Germany, Italy, the Soviet Union, France, Japan and the U.S. to offer a story of the scientific adventure, moral conflicts and twists of fate involving a handful of men who changed the

The films showed the scientists achieving the chain reaction which creates atomic power, the secret research sites at Oak Ridge, Los Alamos, and testing of the first bomb, and the actual Hiroshima mission. This mission ended the hopes and dreams of 78,150 souls and maimed survivors who even to-day are dying because of that fateful Aug. 6, 1945.

The program didn't have the fast-moving action of past Wolper documentaries for CBC TV, but there was excitement and raw drama in the scientific race all over the world towards splitting the atom and releasing the fantastic stores of energy within.

The scenes of the American B-29 bomber Enola Gay, named after pilot Paul Tibbett's mother, over unsuspecting Hiroshima and the mushroom cloud towering high in the air while thousands lay dead and dying below was the horrific symbol of a new

The fateful decision to drop the bomb was a tough one. It was either lose upwards of 5,000,000 men in an invasion of Japan or end the war quickly

It is proper such documentaries are produced for viewing by mass audiences to show the futility of war when such powers as atomic energy can be for peaceful purposes and change forever the future

ONE BIT: At least two of the six projected Danny Thomas specials for next season will be straight dramas. Danny will be seen in a 90-minute version of Rip Van Winkle and in a drama-with-music titled The Night the Baby Was Born." This should give him the chance to play "someone other than

Cigar-Waving Hamilton Carried Ball for Tories

ALVIN HAMILTON

LESTER PEARSON . . . unusual tribute

. . deflated pomposity This is the sixth of a series of 12 excerpts taken from the much longer version contained in RENEGADE IN POWER: THE DIEFENBAKER YEARS, copyright Canada, 1963, Peter C. Newman; published by McClelland &

By PETER C. NEWMAN

It was an indication of how much the Conservative Party changed during the Diefenbaker Years that at the end of them, the most influential Tory, next to John Diefenbaker himself, was Alvin Hamilton, a cheerful ex-farmhand from Delisle, Saskatchewan, whose chief delight lay in deflating what he called "the pomposity of the barons from Bay and St. James Streets," and whose happiest hours were spent in the fragrant farmyards of the Prairies, propounding impossible schemes while waying a five cont cigar. waving a five-cent cigar.

Canadian Conservatism seldom had a more unlikely champion, yet Alvin Hamilton represented the very proto-type of the kind of politically-conscious citizen Diefenbaker appealed to most.

In public, he acted like everybody's favorite country cousin, a lovable hayseed whose explosive and sometimes crude remarks could be condoned because he was strange to the ways of city folk. He smoked Big Ben cigars, "only to the ways of city folk. He smoked Big Ben cigars, only a nickel and rolled right in Joliette County," and once in Saskatoon he interrupted his own press conference by announcing that he'd have to have the ingrown toenall on his left foot pared before answering any more questions. Hamilton's idea of effective speech-making was to pack his addresses with images borrowed from the animal kingdom. As the climax to some of his Prairie speeches kingdom. As the climax to some of his Prairie speeches during the 1963 election campaign, he would strut up and down the platform, beating his chest like an anthropoid, in imitation of "Lester B., howling like an ape." Then, when the audience caught the mood, he'd whoop: "Let's send these apes back to the trees."

Evaluate affective in Hamilton's coals of callical values.

Equally effective in Hamilton's scale of political values was to find a Toronto audience of what he called "General Bull Moose Tories" and to tell them his somewhat unusual version of Conservative philosophy: "The aims of the Tory Party should be to help farmers, the pensioners, the fishermen, and the residents of the North."

Despair of Party's Right Wing

Such statements made him the despair of the party's right wing. But for all his bucolic airs, Alvin was a shrewd politician who understood his public. His unique approach to Canadian problems made him a hero to the nation's less privileged groups. At heart a very shy man, he became uncomfortable in the presence of urbanity and employed a rough tongue and a low-brow manner as a defence mechanism. He was well aware that whenever spokesmen of Canada's economic establishment attacked him, his own supporters rallied even closer behind him.

him, his own supporters ralifed even closer behind him.

His reputation during the Diefenbaker Years was that of a mental lightweight chiefly noted for his many that of a mental lightweight chiefly noted for his many public gaucheries. But, in retrospect, it was evident that Hamilton and the clique of brilliant assistants he was able to attract functioned as the source of nearly all the worthwhile legislation likely to survive the Prince Albert politician. It was Hamilton who gave Diefenbaker's Vision its meaning in the roads-to-resources program. It was Hamilton who thought up the 1961 Resources for Tomorrow Conference. It was Hamilton who introduced the agricultural rehabilitation program which will change the face of rural Canada during the next generation.

He was probably the best and certainly the most popular minister of agriculture in Canadian history. His zeal once even prompted Lester Pearson into an unusual tribute. "We on this side," he told the Commons during a debate on Northern Affairs estimates, "feel that at times debate on Northern Affairs estimates, 'feel that at times the minister's enthusiasm overruns his wisdom and judg-ment, but that doesn't alter the fact that the minister has brought qualities of great energy and enthusiasm to his

The Conservatives cleared out most of the 733-millionbushel carryover that had accumulated when they came into office, and during the 1962 campaign Hamilton was able to tour the West and tell farmers: "Go out and grow all the wheat you can because I'm going to need it to meet

New Language for Farmers

Here was a new kind of language for the Prairie wheat-growers who in the past had been badgered for harvesting crops that were too big. The West felt that in Hamilton it had found a champion at last.

This feeling was reinforced by the avalanche of cheques that flowed out of Ottawa to the farmers during cheques that flowed out of Ottawa to the farmers during the Diefenbaker Years. The Conservative government the Dieferbaker Years. The Conservative government did more for farmers than for any other sector of the population, not only because they were a fertile source of votes, but because this had been a legislative area largely ignored by their Liberal predecessors. Under the Tories, the budget of the Agriculture Department was increased by 240 per cent—from $34 to $286 million. Government handouts of various kinds multiplied five-fold between 1957 and 1962, raising the realized gross income per Canadian farm from $5,241 to $7,575.

Some of this money, such as the $121 million in acre-

Some of this money, such as the $121 million in acreage payments, was a straight handout, but most of Hamilton's agricultural legislation was based on sounder economic principles. The theory held by Hamilton's political enemies—that he never thought hard enough before speaking out on contentious subjects—was hotly disputed by his supporters. They maintained that his manner was all a deliberate part of his grand plan to implement useful political, social and economic reforms in Canada. Hamilton himself admitted that at times he tended to sweep himself off his own feet when on a public platform.

One of the few intellectuals who could articulate, in abstract terms, the pragmatic motivations of Alvin Hamil-abstract terms, the pragmatic motivations of Alvin Hamilton was Roy Faibish, who served throughout most of the Dictenbaker Years as his special assistant.

The best mind the Tories attracted in a generation, Faibish was a history, English, and philosophy graduate from Queen's University. A knowing sparrow of a man, he was intensely loyal to his chief, yet tried to provide the same kind of intellectual stimulus to the whole administration as the Bow Green gives the Conservatives in the istration as the Bow Group gives the Conservatives in the United Kingdom.

Faibish's grasp of the not-always compatible sciences of politics and government was remarkable; his knowledge of anthropology, history, economics, and literature was

Favored Long-Term Measures

During the Diefenbaker Years, Hamilton disagreed with the prime minister's emphasis on short-term political objectives, advocating instead a series of long-term measures. Ideas which Alvin could never successfully sell the prime minister were often accepted when they came from other sources.

Diefenbaker often humiliated Hamilton in private, and at least once in public. On Nov. 9, 1962, Hamilton made some starting proposals to the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool in Regina. Instead of telling the farmers that he would do even more for them, he asked them to consider the idea of setting aside a portion of their final wheat payment to build up a fund for sharing any-losses that might occur in credit sales abroad. He also proposed that western wheat pools set up their own ag-gressive marketing organization.

Questioned in the Commons about these suggestions, Diefenbaker immediately repudiated the minister by an-nouncing that his views "in no way represented govern-

Despite this and other rebuffs, Hamilton remained completely faithful to the Prince Albert politician. In February of 1963 when some members of the Tory cabinet attempted their coup d'etat against Diefenbaker's leader ship, it was Hamilton who railled the backbenchers and successfully beat down the insurrection.

In one of his final appearances as minister of agriculture during the 1963 election campaign, Hamilton told his audience: "I just want to leave one thing with you. have had a government in Canada this last six years that has a simple philosophy, an old philosophy. That's to build Canada. Not by worshipping statistics, but by watching for areas and people that need help—that's the one Canada, One Nation basis. Our task for the next two or three hundred years is going to be moving from the south into the north, so that future generations will know that we have not forgotten the principles upon which this nation was founded and which generation after generation have had to stand together to protect."

It was an appropriate expression of Alvin Hamilton's own flowering in federal politics—a unique phenomenon of the Diefenbaker Years.

Abducted By Gunmen In Nevada

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI)-Frank Sinatra Jr., 19, was kidnapped at gunpoint from this Lake Tahoe gambling centre Sunday night and police in two states issued an all-points bulletin for two young prison escapees suspected of the abduction.

A driving snowstorm at this 6.225-foot-high resort in the Sierra Nevada hampered efforts by FBI agents and Cali-fornia and Nevada sheriff's deputies to find the son of the famous entertainer.

Roadblocks were set up on three roads leading from the area, But 11 hours after the kidnapping, Sinatra and his abductors were still missing.

The young singer was forced from his motel room shortly before he was to perform at a plush gambling casino (Harrah's) at 10 p.m.

BOUND AND GAGGED

With Sinatra was John Foss, member of the band with which the young singer was appearing. The gunmen bound and gagged Foss and as they "Don't move for 10 minutes if. you want to see the kid again."

The abductors were armed with a sawed-off shotgun and a .45 callbre pistol.

Board 'Insists' On Pay Boost For Teachers

LADYSMITH - The Lady smith School Board is taking teachers to arbitration to force them to take a salary increase

The teachers say they don't want a raise, while the board says they must have one. The board argues that if teachers don't get a raise this year the district's salary scale will fall behind other parts of the province and the board will have trouble attracting

But the real bone of conten

It is the salary increment pattern by which at present teachers take 11 years to climb from bottom of the salary scale to the top. The board wants to make this 12 years with salary increases at all levels, but the teachers say they would rather stick with the present agreement.

As a protest the teachers have refused to appoint a representative to the arbitration board. The court will appoint one to act for them.
